Changing your phone ringtone is one of the earliest forms of customization in cellular history. Online communications are making calls less common, but it is still great to hear a personalized phone ringtone when someone calls. The process isn't very straightforward, so we'll show you how to change your ringtone music and Android notification sounds. Editor's note: Instructions in this post were put together using a Google Pixel 4a with 5G running Android 12 and a custom PC running Windows 11. Keep in mind some steps may differ depending on your hardware and software. Turn any song into a ringtoneEdgar Cervantes / Android AuthorityCreating a phone ringtone isn't as complicated as it used to be. You can use any regular mp3 file, but Android will also support other formats such as OGG and WAV. This makes creating your own phone ringtone music a breeze, and you can grab these files from any music store or service you use. Set a custom ringtone in new Android devices: Download or transfer the song you want to set as your ringtone to your phone. This can be done through USB, direct download, or any cloud storage solution of your preference. Open the Settings app. Go to Sound & vibration. Hit Phone ringtone doesn't show up, hit the + button in the bottom-right corner. Find the song and tap on it. Hit Save. Set ringtone music in older devices: This is now a very uncommon method, and only really old phones require you to go through these steps. Regardless, we'll give you the instructions just in case. Download or transfer the song you want to set as your ringtone to your phone. Using a file manager app, move your song to the Ringtones folder. If you have connected your device to a computer via USB, you'll be asked how you want this connection to be handled, so choose to explore files and folders. This will make your phone's storage look and work like any other folder on your PC, so you can copy and paste the file directly to the Ringtones folder. Open the Settings app. Select Sound & notifications. Tap on Phone ringtone. Your new ringtone music should appear in the list of options. More: How to set up mobile hotspot on your Android phone How to trim your ringtone music to start from the song's beginning. To pick your favorite section, you need to trim the audio, which requires some specialized software. Professional audio editors probably don't need much help with paid software like Adobe Audition, Reaper, or Pro Tools, so we will offer guides for simpler and free solutions. How to trim ringtone music using Audacity (macOS, Windows, Linux): Download, install, and launch Audacity. Go to File > Import > Audio. Find and select the ringtone song. Use the selection tool and cursor to highlight the part of the audio you want to keep as your ringtone music. Once a section has been selected, you can press Space to play only that part and make sure you like it. Now click Edit > Remove Special > Trim Audio. Only the section you selected will remain. Press F5 to activate the Time Shift Tool and drag your audio to the beginning of the timeline. I would also advise using the Fade In and Fade Out in the beginning and end. These options can be accessed by going to the Effect menu. Now go to File > Export and select your preferred format. I would use mp3. Move the file to your smartphone and follow the tutorial in the section before to turn it into a phone ringtone. Alternatively, you can use an audio editing app straight from your smartphone. Search for "audio editor" in the Google Play Store, and you will come across a plethora of options. We like Music Editor for its simplicity, but it also helps that it's free. You can pay to remove ads, but that is optional. Also: How to print from Android devices How to trim music using Music Editor (Android): Download, install, and launch Music Editor from the Google Play Store. Tap on the red one the end. You can use the media controls at the bottom to get a preview. Hit the floppy disk icon on the top-right. Select a name for the new file. Hit OK. Now follow the tutorial in the previous section to turn it into your phone ringtone. How to trim music using a website editor. You may not even need specialized software! There are plenty of online tools that can get the job done. One of them is mp3cut.net, and the process is super simple too. Open your browser of choice and go to mp3cut.net. Select the song file you want to trim. Let the website work its magic for a bit. Use the sliders on the left and right to select the area you want to keep as your phone ringtone. Pick whether you want to fade in or out. Also, select the duration of your fade. Select Save. Transfer the file to your phone. Follow the steps in the first section of this article to set the audio as your ringtone song. How to change notification sounds more often than ringtones, so you might also want to customize this audio. Notification sounds can be created the same way you do ringtones. You have to follow the instructions below once you are ready to pick your notification sound. Go into My Sounds. Select the clip you want to use as your notification sound. Hit Save. That way, when your phone starts blasting "Cherry Pie," you know it's your wife. Or when it's "Roll Out (My Business)," you know it's your boss. Fortunately, this is a simple process in Android. Here's how to do it. Before we get started, you should be aware that the process may vary slightly between manufacturers and their respective custom skins. There's no possible way we can show how to do it on every phone out there, but I'll show how to do it on stock Android. Samsung, and LG devices—vou should be able to at least get the idea from there. So, let's get started, How to Set Contacts apps since Contacts is essentially an extension of the dialer, they both ultimately end up in the same place anyway. The first thing you'll want to do is open either of the above-mentioned apps and find the contact you'd like to set a custom ringtone for. In this case, I'll be setting a tone for my good friend Barack Obama. We go way back. Just tap the little pencil icon to open the "Edit contact" menu. From there, tap on the three-dot overflow menu in the top right corner. You see the option that reads "Set ringtones menu, where you can choose whichever tone you'd like for that contact. I happen to know for a fact that Barack is a huge metalhead, so I'm going to use In Flames' "Through Oblivion" for his tone. He'll love that, just hit the check mark next to the overflow menu. And we're done. Can't wait for the next call I get from good ol' B-rock. How to Set Contact Ringtones on Samsung Galaxy Devices On Samsung phones, you can use either the Phone or Contacts app to get the job done. Open the one of your choosing (I'm using Phone because that just makes sense) and navigate to your contacts. I've been meaning to set a custom tone for my girl Katy Perry for a while now, so I might as well do it now. She blows my phone up like you wouldn't believe. Once you've opened the Phone (or Contacts) app, navigate to your contact, tap the "Edit" button in the top right. From there, hit the "More" button, then scroll all the way to the bottom. Tap the "Ringtone" option. I think I'll assign Taylor Swift's "Bad Blood" to Katy, because that just seems like the right thing to do here. Once you've selected your ringtone, tap the "Save" option at the top. And that's that. Too bad Katy will never hear her ringtone when she calls me. How to Set Contact Ringtones on LG phones, just like all the others. Seeing a pattern here? This time, I'll be hooking my buddy Michael Jordan up with a custom ringtone. I'm a pretty busy guy, so I want to know when it's MJ giving me a ring. Once you've opened the Phone or Contacts app and navigated to the contact you want to edit, hit the little pencil icon in the top right to open up the "Edit contact" menu. Scroll all the way down. At the bottom of this page, there are two options: Ringtone and Notification sound. You can all sorts of custom action here. My boy MJ rocked the 23 on his chest for many years, so it's only fair to set his ringtone accordingly—23 from Mike Will Made-It seems to fit the bill perfectly. When you're finished, hit "OK." Then hit "Save." That's it. Done and done. Setting custom ringtones in Android is a pretty straightforward and simple process. And once you've mastered the art of creating ringtones from your favorite songs, the possibilities are endless. Now, if you'll excuse me, I have to create a few more contacts for people I pretend to know.
